

Plumeria Inn Gets World Travel and Tourism Council (WTTC) Stamp of Approval

Plumeria Inn has qualified for the WTTC (World Travel and Tourism Council) stamp, the first globally recognized safety hygiene stamp for travel and tourism. The Healthier Safer Tourism (HST) stamp is the prerequisite and Caribbean recognized.

According to Belinda Charles, manager at Plumeria Inn, “This stamp recognizes countries and companies around the world who adopt health and hygiene practices and standardized safety protocols to promote Safe Travels.”

Recently, Plumeria Inn completed the tourism and health training programme, through the Caribbean Public Health Agency (CARPHA). With these accolades, local and international guests have added confidence when reserving accommodations.

The certificates will represent our commitment to ensuring a healthy and safe environment for our guests, both local and international, and by extension, contribute to the industry being more competitive, resilient and sustainable.
